Webb Garrison tells us about a common ruse among con artists in Ireland many years ago. These con artists would place a ring which looked expensive, but was in effect virtually worthless, in a public place where someone was sure to find it. This ring in the Irish dialect was called a “fawney.”

Sure enough, sooner or later...

You must sign up to view the full content.
If you already have a subscription, please login.